PYRANHA
ANGRY FISH DECK
www.pyranha.com
$149 US

Pyranha enters the spray deck market with the Angry Fish and Grumpy Fish skirts. Aside from the eye-catching rendering of the company's toothy mascot on the deck, the skirt is quite similar to Seals' Shocker, NRS's Drylander or Immersion Research's Shockwave, with one important exception: The Fish comes in two sizes designed for a perfect fit on Pyranha boats (although they can also be used with other manufacturers' boats). The decks are sturdily built with 4-mm neoprene, Kevlar-reinforcing and a tough, easy-on bungee rim.

NRS Toaster Mitts

www.nrsweb.com
$35 US

For most paddlers, a good glove is determined by three qualities: how easy it is to put on/take off, how well it keeps your hands warm, and whether it permits enough dexterity for gripping paddles and pulling spray deck grab loops. A sturdy "bite" tab on the Toaster Mitt means pulling on your second mitt with its gloved neighbour (or your mouth) is a cinch. Fitted neoprene wrist cuffs keep hands dry, and the combination of a 3.5-mm neoprene back and 2.5-mm palm provides above-average insulation. Pre-curved patterning and a textured palm ensure you don't sacrifice solid grip. Bonus: stitched seams won't split when stretched.
